

Life Writers Declaration of Intent

I _____ agree to be a great Life Writers member.

Here's what that means:

I agree to be fully present and participate in all Life Writers events unless I have an unavoidable conflict, but I promise to cry a little at not being there.

I agree to turn on my camera because behind my camera is a real person. I want people in this amazing community to see my beautiful face and get to know me. (Note: You do not have to attend with combed hair, face made up, or in your Sunday best.)

I agree to welcome people into conversations and make room for them to share their ideas even though I know everyone wants to hear what I have to say.

I agree to share my thoughts with fellow Life Writers. Even though I may be a little shy, I will push myself and speak up at all events. What I say may be just what someone needs to hear.

I agree to help my fellow members of Life Writers achieve their writing dreams. In so doing, they may include me in the acknowledgments of their books.

I agree to show up regularly on the Life Writers forum to comment, post assignments, ask questions, and respond to my fellow members. It's a place I enjoy hanging out.

I agree to give my fellow Life Writers members my best and treat them as I wish to be treated, and I like to be treated really well.

I agree to let loose, participate, engage, dance like nobody's watching, and have fun.

I agree and understand that the more I show up and participate, the more I'll get out of Life Writers. I believe in magic, but magic hasn't yet written my book.

Look out, Life Writers, because here I come!
